PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION:

This Mansard roof, Second Empire style building is similar to the Valley Forge Brew Pub Restaurant building next door. It is 2.5 stories high with stucco over brick walls and a fish scale slate roof. The core is ell-shaped, with a flat roofed, 2-story addition filling the void of the ell. The roof, being the main decorative feature of the house, has an el-shaped flair, highlighted by the fish scale slate shingles. Fenestration varies: the dormers (six are visible from the road) have curved tops with 2x2 sash windows; the second floor windows are also 2x2 sash, and feature highly decorative arched lintels; the first floor, main façade fenestration consists of narrow French doors with transoms flanking the atrium door in the center. The house is three-bays wide. Other features include decorative quoins and a shed roof hood over the main door. The rear addition is frame and clad in machined shingles.

Classification: The house is Class I. (DOE 12/2/1994). Also, due to its highly decorative architectural features and largely unaltered appearance, this house is Class I.
