PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION:

This house and barn off the road are fine examples of mid-nineteenth century architecture.

The house is a stucco-clad two story, four bay, end gable asphalt-roofed structure built c. 1859. It has a pent roof separating the two floors. Windows on both floors have shutters, and the door is in the second bay. A two story, stucco-clad addition on the rear gives the house an L-shaped plan.

Associated Resource: The large barn, also built c. 1859, is clad with stucco and has a pent roof one side and a one and a half story stone addition on the other side. The roof is end gabled with asphalt shingles. The addition is used as garage. The roof on this addition has two gabled roof dormers and an overhanging eave.

Classification: The modern alterations make this house a Class II resource.
