This is a vernacular house with a significant rear addition. The core is an 18 x 30 three bay house with two stories and an attic. There are stucco clad stone interior end chimneys at each gable end; in one of the gables is a 4 light attic window. The house is clad with stucco. A one-story porch on the façade has a gabled roof supported by two square columns. One of the basement windows is located below a blind arch. The one and a half story addition is a gabled structure sitting on a perpendicular axis. It has one gabled roof dormer facing the side street. An enclosed porch stands attached to the addition, and part of this porch has been enclosed and clad with stucco.

Classification: This is a nice vernacular house. Its large additions make it a Class II resource.

Bernhard — Walker — Greenawalt Farms (Now Montgomery County College)

Photography by George S. Peck

On the Montgomery County College Campus, there are three houses which date to before the Revolution. From Edward Mathews Scrapbook No. 92 p. 42, it is difficult to determine whether they are Bernhard, Walker, or Greenawalt houses when comparing them with the different maps, and the knowledge of how all three families were interrelated. Besides this, there are several branches of the Bernhard clan and it is a puzzle to put them in their proper places. Marriage within and among the three families further complicate the quest for whose house belonged to whom.

It began in this particular area in 1685, with the Penn grant to Richard Whitpain. In a series of transfers, not necessary to recite here, Rees Thomas and Anthony Morris came into possession of 300 acres in 1713 which covered this northeast section of the township.

William and Richard Thomas, sons of Rees, sold to Jacob Kurr in 1746. This same Jacob Kurr, the farmer, but more importantly a builder, also bought land south and east from John Phillip Boehm. Jacob Kurr had a house-plan which he used for other people. Unfortunately, he never put a date-stone on any that he is reputed to have erected. The pattern and appearance of many early dwellings which were researched, when viewed through pictures, are clues that say he can be credited with designing and building many that are still in existence.

The next owners are not on record, but before the Revolution, Jacob Ulrich became the owner and then the property changed hands many times:

- 1777 — George Wright bought from Ulrick
- 1777 — Paul Bower bought from Wright (Bower was the trustee of St. John's Lutheran Church when the land was received from George and Elizabeth Kastner)
- 1778 — Edward Laskey
- 1783 — Henry Dawson (At this date it was a message plantation — paid 1,000 pounds in Continental currency)
- 1786 — Zebulon Potts (Went bankrupt and property was seized and sold to Abraham Knitzing)
- 1797 — Mordecai Jones invested in it
- 1798 — Henry Greenawalt bought

Henry was the son of a Jonathan Greenawalt who lived "½ mile south of Franklinville" and is listed as a soldier in the Revolution Army.
