PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION:

This house is an example of vernacular construction. It was once the farmstead for a large farm, now developed. It is a three story, three bay house measuring 20 x 35 feet and having interior end chimneys in the gable ends. The house was built with brick c. 1880 and covered with stucco. Each window has louvered shutters; two large 20th century bay windows appear on the first floor. A pent roof separates the first floor from the second and has a gabled entry hood supported by square columns. A one story shed addition appears on the rear of the house supported by square columns.

Additional Resource: (1) Double Corn Crib The walls of this building slope outward to give the building more volume. It is an end gabled, 1½ story frame building.

Classification: The many alterations on this house make it a Class II resource.
