PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION:

This dwelling was originally a barn associated with 1400 Penllyn Blue Bell Pike. The building is an end-gable structure (wood shingles) with vertical cladding resting on a stone foundation. A new door and new windows have been cut into the façade; the original six over six double-hung windows remain on the gable ends.

Classification: Although this dwelling is in good condition, the drastic alterations warrant a classification as a Class II resource.

Converted Barn Home of Edward and Merle Zoller

This barn, in Blue Bell where Stenton Avenue ends (1406 Blue Bell Road), was purchased in December of 1971 by Dorothy Conard's daughter, Betty Jane Fad, and her husband, Arthur. The bottom portion, which is stone, is part of the original structure but the top section of the barn burned in 1911 and was rebuilt in 1912. The work done in the rebuilding in 1912 was among the last construction done without the use of modern construction materials and the beams are pegged rather than being nailed. One section in the lower level of the barn is floored with cobblestone and it is said to have been a butcher shop at one time. The walls of one room on the first-level were lined with quite elaborate cages for birds which were used in the cock fights that were held here and were well attended by the sports fans of early times.

When the barn was being converted to a residence, the Fad's were primarily interested in restoring the barn rather than rebuilding it from new materials and none of the original beams were covered. The floor is the original barn floor and the door between the kitchen and dining room is an old barn stall door, marked by ridges where a horse had chewed on the wood.

In 1975, this converted barn was purchased by Reverend and Mrs. Lawrence Carter. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Zoller bought the property and moved here in March 1977.
